Chapter 1 by Ryan DeAngelis

If I were anyone else, I would be in heaven. Any other person would be overjoyed to be able to do what I can do, to "save the world." But no. It had to be me. A social recluse who would give anything to not be noticed by others, and couldn't give less of a crap about being a "savior." So of course it was me who ended up with this... ability. It was me who had to endure the recognition and the tabloid articles. It's not even the actual "power" that I find the worst thing. That's how I came to know about it. If only the whole world hadn't seen it...

Chapter 2 by Lauren

I can not go to school peacefully without people talking about me. Apparently I am too "important" in their life's to be left alone. Sometimes I just want to be alone but when I look out my window I see people lining up at my door waiting for me to come out. If the camera didn't catch a glimpse of me that day people would have just known me as me. Not me as a superhero.

Chapter 3 by Reah

I mean, I didn't mean to do it. It sort of... happened. Just like that. One second I was trying to help my sister get to safety. The next I was in the thick of it, Punching this random guy and then over in the back of the fight where none of our soldiers could get to and I was sending them flying.

I just wanted to help Milana, not absolutely everyone else and completely destroy my quiet and peaceful life style.

Who the heck wants to have teleportation. And that's not even the worst of it. Ugh... things could not get any worse.

Yeah, note to self, never say this
